

Problems are at the centre of what many people do at work every day. Whether you're solving a problem for a client (internal or external), supporting those who are solving problems or discovering new problems to solve, the problems you face can be large or small, simple or complex, and easy or difficult. A fundamental part of every manager's role is finding ways to solve them. So, being a confident problem solver is really important to your success. Much of that confidence comes from having a good process to use when approaching a problem. With one, you can solve problems quickly and effectively. Without one, your solutions may be ineffective, or you'll get stuck and do nothing, with sometimes painful consequences.

Magic Info About This Course

Police officers often have little time to react, so they must use their best judgment to make effective, expedient decisions. Powerful problem-solving skills often help law enforcement agents pacify tense situations before they worsen. They also must have strong problem-solving and analytical skills so they can evaluate situations and arrest offenders to protect the public. Forensic science – like many other investigative sciences – comprises sampling from large batches of material and planning and analysis of quality studies, for which statistical methods are central, making this a vital skill to learn in any forensic field.

Upgrade Your Course With Accredited Unit Standards

You can upgrade your course to receive Unit Standard Credits on the NQF. These credits can add up to a full qualification, accredited by SASSETA.

Please note that if the syllabus, or the study materials or the assessments change, then you run the risk of having to redo your Skills programme when you need to upgrade to the accredited unit standards. So to avoid this risk, you should upgrade as soon as you have finished your Skills course.

1. For a full programme, you have six months after completing with Skills Academy to upgrade.
2. For a short course, you have three months after completing a subject with Skills Academy.

You will need to refer to the learning materials you got from Skills Academy. So you should hold on to your study materials, and if you want to upgrade, do it as soon as you have completed your course with Skills Academy.
